JUDGE BACH

"EXPLAINS" BYRD INTERVIEW

Hargis' Attorney Says They Offered No Sop to Byrd But Merely Outlined "A Commendable Course."

In recent publication in the daily papers, Judge J. J. C. Bach, of counsel for the alleged assassins of J. B. Marcum, on trial at Breathittville, was reported as having made an offer on behalf of the Hargises, Callahan and others to A. Floyd Byrd, to stop the political fight of the Breathitt Junta on Byrd and allow him to go Congress, provided he would let up his prosecution of Breathitt feudists. Judge Bach while here on legal business yesterday, denied that he made the reported offer. His explanation, how ever, is so similar to what the papers reported in the first instance that it is interesting to say the least. Here is how Bach explains it:

"I never made any such proposition to Mr. Byrd, and never had any such proposition to make to him, nor was I ever authorized to make such proposition to him, and I am sure that it would not have been accepted or entertained if I offered it."

"Senator A. H. Harris was talking to me about what would be a commendable course for Mr. Byrd to take in the prosecution of Breathitt cases, and also in regard to his future political prospects; that Mr. Byrd should come into Breathitt county and help to bury the hatred and animosities between the factions here, and join in the canvass in favor of Congressman Hopkins and help to carry the county for him and help to get the fusion and discordant elements in the county to support Hopkins; that Byrd should advise the dismissal of the Breathitt prosecutions and wipe them off the various court dockets; that he should dismiss the Marcum-Hargis damage suit in Clark county and accept a compromise for it, and conduct himself in such a manner as to restore him to his former political standing in this section in order that he might run for Congress for the next term. He talked with me along these lines, but he never sent to Byrd a proposition through me looking to such settlement."—Lexington Leader.

All Who Drink Are Dead.

Twenty-five years ago I knew every man, woman and child in Peckskill; and it has been a study with me to mark boys who started in every grade of life with myself, to see what has become of them. I was up last fall, and began to count them over, and it was an instructive exhibit. Some of them became clerks, merchants, manufacturers, lawyers and doctors. It is remarkable that everyone of those who drank is dead; not one living of my age. Barring a few who were taken by sickness, every one who proved a wreck and wrecked their family did it from rum and no other cause. Of those who were church-going people, who were steady, who were frugal and thrifty, every single one of them without an exception, owns the house in which he lives, and has something laid by, the interest of which, with his house, would carry him through many a rainy day. When a man becomes debased with gambling, rum or drink he does not care; all his finer feelings are crowded out. The poor women at his home are the ones who suffer—suffer in their tenderest emotions, suffer in their affections for those whom they love better than life. —Chauncey M. Depew.

Where Citizens and Officials Have Backbone It Can Be Done.

County Attorney Moore, of Bourbon, says if people want to get rid of "blind tigers" they can do it. And he has a way of illustrating what he says. For years the negro town adjacent to Paris has been running "blind tigers" in almost every form, but when Mr. Moore got through with them they were glad to quit. Now he says it is all both about being unable to get rid of them. We have always thought that where the citizenship and the officials had and backbone it could be done. The Kentucky Issue.

Their Eyes Pity or Spare Not.

All who sell liquors in the common way, to any that will buy, are poisoners-general. They murder His Majesty's subjects by wholesale; neither does their eye pity nor spare. They drive them to hell like sheep. And what is their gain? Is it not the blood of these men? Who, then, would envy their large estates and sumptuous palaces? A curse is in the midst of them. The curse of God is in their gardens, their groves—a fire that burns to the nethermost hell. Blood, blood is there! The foundation, the doors, the walls, the roof, are stained with blood.—John Wesley.

New Motor Car Its Own Engine.

The electric storage battery motor car, made for the Missouri and Kansas Interurban Railway Company, started Tuesday 7th from the Baltimore and Ohio Station in Philadelphia under its own power on the long journey half way across the continent.

Never before has an electric car been manufactured that could be operated with success except with the trolley or third rail system. This one is its own locomotive. It can be run on any tracks that will fit the wheels. There are no wires, no power houses, none of the paraphernalia connected with electric traffic. The new car was subjected to a rigid test on the Baltimore and Ohio between Philadelphia and Wilmington and acquitted itself to the satisfaction of its builders, maintaining an average speed of fifty-five miles an hour and never running short of power.

Large storage batteries are the direct drivers of the car. The car carries its own power house—a gasoline engine with a dynamo that stores up electricity in the batteries when the car is going down grade, running slowly or standing still.

The new car measures fifty-two feet nine inches, with a seating capacity for forty two persons.

The Chicago and Alton Railroad Company has ordered six of the cars at a cost of $18,000 each.

Kentucky Committee to Welcome Bryans.

National Committeeman Urey Woodson, of Kentucky, upon the request of the chairman of the committee having in charge the arrangements for the New York reception of W. J. Bryan, has invited the following Kentuckians to head the delegation from this State to welcome Mr. Bryan on his arrival in New York: John L. Gray, of Smithland; L. C. Flournoy, of Morgantown; Robert Rhodes, Jr., of Bowling Green; Ben Johnson, of Bardonia; Thomas R. Gordon, of Louisville; D. Linn Gooch, of Lexington; John R. Allen, of Lexington; R. F. Peak, of Shelbyville; John F. Hager, of Ashland; Allie W. Young, of Mt. Sterling; James Garnett, of Columbia. Mr. Woodson has been allotted one hundred seats in the Madison Square Garden for distribution among the Kentuckians and has the promise of more should he need them.

One of the railroad companies has offered a special train from Louisville to New York, consisting of Pullman sleepers and a dining car, provided as many as one hundred agree to make the trip together.

Leave Lexington for Barboursville to Guard Murder Prisoners.

In obedience to the orders of Gen. Roger D. Williams, who had a conference Tuesday with Governor Beckham, at which it was decided to send the troops to Barboursville, Knox county, to protect the murderers of Mrs. Broughton, Col. J. Embury Allen, commander of the Second Kentucky, with five picked men from Company C of Lexington, including Capt. T. W. Woodward and the local hospital corps, left Lexington Thursday for Barboursville.

The detachment included eleven men. They were joined at Livingston by Capt. C. W. Longmire and his artillery corps with a gaiting gun. Capt. Longmire and detachment, who left Frankfort Thursday morning, also went by way of Stanford, Ky., where they got the two negro prisoners charged with the crime, who have been at that place in jail.

DRAMSHOPS TO PAY ROAD TAX

Plan Announced By Gov. Folk of Missouri.

Gov. Folk will ask the next General Assembly to pass a law by which the retail liquor interests will be taxed for the benefit of the public highways. He plans to have each dramshop pay a State license of $200 a year, the fund created to be used to build good roads, beginning with two great free highways across the State, one from Kansas City to St. Louis, the other from Iowa to the Arkansas line.

Other legislation to be asked for, as outlined by the Governor includes giving the executive power creating the office of State Excise Commissioners, with power to revoke dramshop licenses; refusing brewers and distillers the right to an interest in saloons.

Indictment Returned Against the Standard Oil Company.

An indictment charging the Standard Oil Company with receiving rebates in the form of non-payment of storage charges to certain railroad companies, was returned by the Federal grand jury, in session in Chicago, Illinois, on officials of the company and no railroad companies or officers being named.

This is the case investigated by the grand jury in Cleveland, Ohio, where it was found that the grand jury had no jurisdiction.

The indictment contains nineteen counts. The true bill comes under the Elkins law, which provides a fine of from $1,000 to $20,000 for each violation.

Man Drowned Near Lancaster.

Harvey Layton was drowned while attempting to cross White Lick Creek on horseback, after a heavy rainstorm. He was 70 years old.

William Davis, a prominent man who resides eight miles from Lancaster on the Kirkville pike, was drowned Wednesday morning.

Kentucky Fair Dates.

The following are the dates fixed for holding the Kentucky fairs for 1906 as far as reported: Columbia, Aug. 21—4 days. Shepherdsville, Aug. 21—4 days. Springfield, Aug. 22—4 days. Guthrie, Aug. 23—3 days. Nicholasville, Aug. 28—3 days. Shelbyville, Aug. 28—4 days. Florence, Aug. 29—4 days. Bradenton, Aug. 29—4 days. Ewing, Aug. 30—3 days. Elizabethtown, Sept. 4—3 days. Paris, Sept. 4—5 days. Monticello, Sept. 11—4 days. Glasgow, Sept. 12—4 days. Lexington, Sept. 17—5 days. Falmouth, Sept. 26—5 days.

"Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is the best remedy for that often fatal disease—croup. Has been used with success in our family for eight years."—Mrs. Whiteacre, Buffalo, N. Y. 3-5t.

The plea that the liquor laws are unenforceable in certain cities is either dictated by pitiful inhumanity or devilish indifference.

WHY SO WEAK?

Kidney Troubles May Be Sapping Your Life Away. Mt. Sterling People Have Learned This Fact.

When a healthy man or woman begins to run down without apparent cause, becomes weak, languid, depressed, suffers backache, headache, dizzy spells and urinary disorders, look to the kidneys for the cause of it all. Keep the kidneys well and they will keep you well. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and keep them well. Here is Mt. Sterling testimony to prove it:

Samuel T. Greene, of Holt Ave., Mt. Sterling, Ky., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills were worth their weight in gold to me. That is my opinion and the following are my reasons. For a good many years I suffered with kidney trouble brought on I believe, by straining myself at heavy lifting. The dull aching across the small of my back and the sharp pains if I stooped or straightened, made life anything but pleasant to me. There was also a very annoying and distressing urinary difficulty particularly observable at night. I took all kinds of medicine supposed to be good for kidney trouble, and doctored a great deal, but without obtaining any noticeable benefit until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills. The change the first box made in my condition was surprising and I continued the treatment by taking another, when all symptoms of disordered kidneys disappeared and I felt myself cured."

Prohibition Can Be Enforced.

For two months after the earthquake not one saloon in the California metropolis was permitted to operate. The saloonkeepers wanted to do business, of course, but they were forbidden. There is the bald fact to put an end to the false doctrine that a prohibition law can not be enforced. It can be enforced if the officers of the law will enforce it.

The fundamental facts demonstrated by the San Francisco experience are that the saloon business exists by the sufferance of the people, that it is utterly subordinate to the public will and that laws for its control or complete dismissal are effective or ineffective according to the quality of the administrators of the law.—American Issue.

Prisoners Released From Penitentiary.

John and Columbus Shortridge, father and son, of Pike county, were released by the State Prison Commission. They were sent up on May 8, 1904, to serve terms for manslaughter, the father for eight years and the son for six. Other beneficiaries were Miss Vina Brewer, of Harlan county, and Monroe Pittman, of Pulaski county. The woman was sent up for house breaking. Pittman, aged 15, for detaining a woman.

How To Save Money.

If the laws concerning the Sunday traffic in liquor are not enforced, it is due to corruption, indifference, and incompetency on the part of police and prosecuting officers. Such conditions cannot continue anywhere in Kentucky under the present laws, is an honest official utterance.

How To Save Money.

In these times when living expenses have increased from thirty to fifty per cent, it is unusual to hear of a standard remedy being offered at half price. Yet that is the way W. S. Lloyd, the popular druggist, is selling Dr. Howard's celebrated specific for the cure of dyspepsia and constipation. In addition to selling a fifty cent bottle, containing a month's treatment of sixty doses, for 25 cents, he gives his personal guarantee with every bottle he sells to refund the money if it does not give satis faction.

This unusual offer has brought hundreds of customers to his store in the last few weeks, yet out of the many bottles of Dr. Howard's specific he has sold, but one customer has asked to have the money returned. This was done without any questions, although W. S. does not think the remedy could have been given a fair trial.

J-25-A-16.

If the enforcement of the Sunday closing law is so nauseating to the retail liquor dealers, what will they do when the privilege to sell on any day is taken from them? It will be either anarchy, outright or a wholesale undertaking business for some men.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

FOR CONSIDERATION.

We are authorized to announce that J. W. Reid and B. W. Trimble, in connection with the publication of the Advocate, are in possession of the following information:

Last week a man, in speaking of a saloonist who had taken his business from another man not in sympathy with saloons, said: "I would be like him." We are not working for a boycott, but we readily see how enthusiastic temperance people would be to exceedingly anxious to buy merchandise from a man whose life is a toper, who tries to force his employees to refrain from temperance work or meetings, or who is evidently in sympathy with the saloon element. Some people are curious! Why should a mother prefer to spend her money with a man who is leading her boy astray, instead of with a man whose life is exemplary and helpful, and a blessing to her boy?

WHO ARE THEY?

Saturday, August 18th, the question of saloons or no saloons will be settled in Scott county. Opponents to saloons are making a continued fight and it looks like no run for Scott county. Who are those most anxious? They who regard the purity of home, the health of young manhood, the continued possession of the faculties given of God, the maintenance of the powers of the senses, the possession of endearing character, contentment, joy and a hope of Heaven. These are they who will vote for the closing of the saloon and all the evils that follow in their course.

WILL BUILD HOUSES.

The city of Mt. Sterling has many new houses going up and with the passage of local option law the earnings of the laboring man instead of going into the open saloon can be put into a home for the wife and children.

WORK NOW.

If the people would have the thrift and growth to continue they must be "working at it." Where is our Business Men's Club? No time to sleep now. If you don't see what you want ask for and demand it.

We like to see a man who is courageous enough to condemn wrong in his own church, or political party, or business association. Of course prudence must dictate when and how the protest must be made.

Because other cities have not the nerve to vote out the saloon will cut no figure with Mt. Sterling people. The saloon must go.

The women of Mt. Sterling are organized to contend against their most deadly foe, the open saloon. What are the men doing?

Is it not pitiable to see a man lining up with great evils, because he fears the opposite course might lose him some trade?

Governor Beckham's opening speech will be delivered at Lexington to-night.

It is not safe for a man to be enthusiastic on both sides of a moral question.

Ordinarily the innocent man has no defense to make and seldom kicks.

PROTECT THE PRIVILEGE OF A SALOON-KEEPER.

We are opposed to the license system when applied to the sale of intoxicants. If we had to choose between low license with many saloons and high license with few saloons we would choose the latter. If we must have high license with few saloons or prohibition and saloons we will say close out the saloons. We favor the prohibition of the retail liquor business. It is not necessary for our present purpose to give in detail our reasons for such a conclusion; nor are we to be regarded as hostile to saloon-keepers, nor as attacking those who conduct their business according to law. Saloon-keepers have certain privileges conferred upon them by law; they are permitted to conduct business under certain conditions. A compact has been made to which each saloon-keeper is a party and the city and county or State governments is the other party. So long as the saloonist conducts his business in compliance with the law he deserves and should have protection, his rights and privilege conferred should be guaranteed to him.

If all saloonists violate the law they should be admonished, warned or forced to conduct business properly. If some observe the law while others do not, the latter should be forced by civil authority to respect the rights of the former who are obedient. The patriotic law-abiding citizen should be as quick to speak in defense of a saloonist who does business lawfully as of the editor who does business lawfully (we are not considering the moral phase of either business).

To come directly to the point. We have frequently heard that three saloonists in our city, in regard to the sale of whiskey on Sunday at least, endeavor to obey the law which obligates them to make no sales on Sunday. Furthermore it is currently reported by various citizens that some other saloonists are frequent violators of the Sunday closing law. Citizens whether editors, lawyers, councilmen, doctors, policemen, merchants or saloonists observing the law, who know that one or more saloonists are violating the law should see to it that such violations are investigated and the proprietors made to suffer the penalty. Fair dealing and justice demand that these three and others like them be protected from the reckless violator and bootlegger.

No citizen who has knowledge of facts sufficient to close a saloon should hesitate to tell, any more than he would hesitate to tell the name of a man who would willingly and maliciously shoot his neighbor's horse, or burn his house or steal his pocket-book.

If the authorities can not control this business, let the people by their votes make the opening of saloons in our city impossible.

BURGLARS BEHIND BARS

Make a Break for Liberty But Are Captured.

In our last issue we told of the arrest of three young men giving their names as Frank Sayman, George Martin and George Hamlin, and their commitment to jail for robbing the home of Mrs. Williams. On Monday afternoon between 2 and 3 o'clock the town was startled by the fact that these men had made a dash from the county jail and were endeavoring to escape.

We are informed that James Best who recently returned to town was at the jail and was furnishing some ice to the prisoners. When he opened the large iron door they saw their chance. Mr. Best says they knocked him down. They rushed down the stairway, through the office and into the street. Mr. Wilson had left the office only a minute or two and had gotten to the east entrance to court yard when he saw the prisoners running. Yell, did he? That is what they say. He raised the town. A lively and exciting chase was on up West High St. The prisoners dashed through the private grounds of Mrs. Annie Baum or Mrs. Reid and endeavored to secrete themselves. The crowd was too close and the fugitives were soon en route to the jail. No one was hurt. How many were scared we do not know. Of course these men will get away if they can, especially when a good chance comes. They have shown that they can fight and run. We presume that from this time they will be closely watched if not kept in separate cells.

GEN. N. B. HAYS AT MT. STERLING

On Saturday Attorney General N. B. Hays, of Louisville, was here in the interest of his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Kentucky and spoke to a large and enthusiastic audience. The General was met at the C. and O. depot with carriages and a brass band, which headed the march to the National Hotel. At 1 o'clock, in fine shape, he was before his audience. The General said there may be some Republicans present and if so, in the contest, I would have them take no comfort to themselves because of our differences. Democrats have troubles but we propose to settle these family affairs among ourselves. I would not contribute a thought to a party so famous for her trust support and cunning in obtaining graft.

He gave some time to answering the speech of Auditor Hager, candidate for Democratic nomination for Governor, made here last court day, saying he was anxious to meet him on the stump and that he would either lead or follow in debate as Mr. Hager may choose. He charged the administration of recklessness in the expenditure of the State money, giving much of his time as heretofore in the discussion of the conduct of the Printing Commission and also that of the State Capital building.

It was listened to closely and he made more friends than he had when he came to Mt. Sterling, and the race here between Mr. Hays and Mr. Hager is considered by both parties to be a close one.

Gen. Hays spoke at Sharpburg Saturday evening to another large crowd, spent Sunday with his nephew, J. Smith Hays, in Winchester, and again he spoke to another large gathering of people on Monday at Owensville.

PRESIDENT'S SON-IN-LAW

Will be Opposed for Re-Election by Campers Federation.

Congressman Nick Longworth, of Cincinnati, the President's son-in-law, is to be fought by the American Federation of Labor. Plans for Federation are being perfected. Frank Riess made them public.

"We will submit a list of names to the Republicans," he said, "and another list to the Democrats. That list will contain the names of men whose nomination for Congress will be acceptable to organized labor. If the nominees of the party come from that list we have nothing more to say. If both parties choose from that list, then we will keep our hands out of the fight. If not, we are going to help President Sam Gompers."

"Will Judge Goebel's name appear on that list?" Riess was asked. "It will not," he replied. "Nor will Nick Longworth's."

GRAYSON'S FOR- GOTTEN PROMISE.

By HAL HUMISTON.
(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)
Grayson sat at the car window drinking in the landscape with an eagerness he had not known for many years. The delights of the theater and the opera, the sensation of travel, even the fierce contest of the stock exchange, had all palled upon him. Jaded and tired from contact with the world, he was on his way back to the old home in the quiet hills to see if they were really as refreshing as they seemed to him as he looked back to them during brief pauses in his feverish life.

It really seemed to him as though they were, as he sat looking out of the window and recognized the familiar landmarks. He was getting closer and closer every moment—now was scarcely twenty miles from the old home station and the landscape grew more familiar each moment. He could scarcely believe there could have been so little change in so long a time. After all how long was it? Only ten years. But what an age seemed to have been included in that decade.

Since he had gone forth to world of fame and fortune it seemed as though some of time had passed. Well he had not been so unsuccessful. He certainly had won the money he had set out to get. Yes, he was a rich man, and they listened on 'change when he spoke. As to fame—well, what is fame anyway? He was known wherever great affairs of finance were conducted, and was that not as much fame as to drone about in legislative halls?

The fact remained, however, that he was desperately tired of it all—tired and worn out and it seemed to him if only he could get into his old jeans and hike across the hills to Stillson's pond with a hook and line in his pocket, cut a pole from one of Kyle's trees without getting caught by the dog, and spend the day standing knee deep in the water and land a good mess of fish and then carry them back to Aunt Hannah and coax her to cook them the way she used to—that he would be supremely happy.

While he was thinking these things the train stopped at a junction and a young woman got on. He noticed her casually and returned to his thoughts and then tried to count the telegraph poles as he used to do in the old days—and laughed when he failed even as he used to fail. His eyes wandered back to the young woman who had entered at the last station. There was something strangely familiar about the side-face which puzzled him. Presently he looked at her again and noted that she was regarding him out of the corner of her eye.

After a time their eyes met and both flashed recognition. She half rose and exclaimed:

"Paul—surely it is Paul Grayson."

He was at her side before she had completed the sentence.

"Nina," he cried, "As I live, Nina Horton!"
He sat down beside her and noted with exquisite pleasure the soft flush which grew in her cheek. He had nearly forgotten Nina; how careless of him. His old sweetheart with whom he had sweated the countryside and taken to the spelling bees, and fought the other boys about and pledged eternal fidelity to and kissed in the moonlight and to whom, when he went away he had pledged his heart. There was a distinct thrill in meeting her again. It made him feel quite young again—and so handsome and ruddy and well poised, too. He scarcely could believe it was the gallow maiden in short dresses he had left. And she evidently was as greatly moved as he at the meeting. His heart heaved. He had not felt such a thrill since Northern Pacific broke and lost him a half million in a half hour and he switched quick enough to get out even in the next ten minutes—and then went to the hospital with nervous prostration.

"And so you have come back at last, Paul," she was saying softly and her eyes dropped. "We have been looking for you and waiting for you for a long time."

His pulse throbbled as he leaned toward the splendid creature.

Then something in her face or attitude struck him and he leaned back half-stunned and made a common place reply.

Great heavens, had Nina taken it seriously? Had she waited for him all these strenuous years and remembered her pledges and his.

"And you have not written for ever so long," she went on, with the most charming air of reproach. "Years and years, Paul."

He mentioned some conventional excuse. Write—why, he even had forgotten the old hill side home these many years, and as for writing, did any busy operator ever write anything longer than a telegram? But the alarming thing was the coy attitude of the girl and the sidelong glances she shot from her expressive brown eyes—he never had noticed in the old days that she had such fetching eyes. But this situation was becoming embarrassing—especially when he remembered Madonna-like Pauline in his great castle on the avenue. Of course Pauline never could send the blood coursing through his veins as this woman was doing—but then Pauline gave his establishment with the aristocratic flavor of her blue blood. Sometimes he wished it were a trifle more red even at the expense of her regal dignity.

Now if Nina was there with her glowing cheeks and sparkling eyes and little figure to share—but pshaw, what nonsense is this? "We have missed you so much," Nina was saying. Then looking up with a happy ingenuous smile she went on: "But it's all right now, that you have come back."

Great heavens, was she angling close to him? Yes, there was no mistake about it. And what could a man do but snuggle a little to the point of pitying her. "You will come right up to the house with me, won't you, Paul," she whispered. "There really is nowhere else to stop. You know Aunt Hannah is dead."

Aunt Hannah dead? And he never had heard of it? That was a shock indeed. But to go home with her—that surely would lead to consequences. No, it evidently was time to stop this nonsense. His heart was full of pity as he said:

"My dear Nina, I have been a brute, but out in the world men lose themselves and—forget the old home ties and the old days. I have been in the thick of the fight and—and—I have been so long away—that—you see I built up a new life in a new place—and you see I didn't think you remembered—or took it seriously—and all that sort of thing—and—and—Nina, the fact is I am a married man and just came back to get a whiff of the old air."

He paused lamely and she lifted her handkerchief to her face so he could not see it; but he could feel her tremble and he felt the guilty wrench he was.

"Smittville," yelled the brakeman just then and the train slowed down. Poor Grayson would have given ten thousand not to have had to get off with the girl who still held her handkerchief to her face. But he was in for it and resolved to meet his punishment.

He picked up her baggage and his and laboriously waddled off the car after her.

On the platform she put her handkerchief in her pocket and Grayson noticed that there were no traces of tears in her eyes. Before he had time to wonder about it a tall-bearded fellow with bronzed skin and cheery voice strode forward and gathered Nina into his arms with a fervor which threatened the integrity of her ribs. Presently when she had extricated herself from the embrace, which was before Grayson recovered his senses, she turned to him with that coyness which always suggests mischief and said:

"Oh, Mr. Grayson, I am so glad to meet my husband, Mr. Simpson. Joe, this is Mr. Paul Grayson, the New York banker. He used to live here years ago and we were great chums when we were children."

Then as Grayson mechanically shook hands with the big bronzed fellow she went on: "I have been trying to induce Mr. Grayson to stop at our house while he visits the scenes of his boyhood. Really you must, Paul, and see my girls. Nina is eight and May is six and Jessie is four and Lillian is two—and we've the sweetest little baby just three months old."

ARE NOT HEAVY DRINKERS

Compared with Other Races, Americans May Be Called a Temperate People.

Americans are only moderate drinkers compared with those of other countries. The average citizen of the United States, counting in the women and children (which is not fair, but serves for the moment as a basis to figure upon), consumes in the course of a year liquors which contain one and a third gallons of pure alcohol. But the Frenchman, who, though formerly one of the soberest, has become the worst drunkard in the world, absorbs annually three and a half gallons of alcohol. The Belgian and the Swiss come next, with a consumption of two and four-fifths gallons. Then follow the Spaniard, with two and a third gallons, the Italian with just a trifle less, the Englishman and German with two and a tenth and the Austro-Hungarian with about one and three-quarters gallons.

On the other hand the American citizen by no means stands at the top of the list in respect to sobriety.

The Swede drinks only one and a sixth gallons of pure alcohol in a year; the Hollander drops considerably below him, with one gallon even; the relatively virtuous Russian, notwithstanding his much advertised addiction to vodka, absorbs only a trifle more than six-tenths of a gallon, and, finally, the Norwegian, who occupies a proud eminence as the most abstemious man in the world, barely exceeds a modest half-gallon of the stuff in a twelve-month's potations. It might be added for the sake of definiteness that the average person in the United States annually drinks one and a third gallons of pure spirits (which are 50 per cent. alcohol), one-third of a gallon of wine and 10 1/2 gallons of malt liquors, chiefly beer.

Took Advantage of the Opening.
Not many men were ready in reply as was the late Patrick Collins, mayor of Boston. At the very opening of his mayoralty came full proof of this.

There was a knock on the door of the municipal chief executive's office, and in response to Mr. Collins' "Come in" entered a diminutive messenger boy.

"Oh, 'scuse me," he said, in a tone that suggested both disappointment and apology; "I was lookin' for de mayor."

"Well, I'm Mr. Collins," replied that official, reassuringly.

"But I thought you was short?" stammered the other.

And his honor replied:

"You're quite right. Can you lend me five?"

War of Balloons

At Cincinnati's Great Industrial Show.

"The Blue Moon" and "Fighting the Flames" Spectacles of Fall Festival.

CINCINNATI, O., Aug. 15.—Years ago Cincinnati was given the name "The Mother of Expositions." Those industrial shows of old pale in comparison with the Fall Festivals held on the sites of earlier triumphs of National prominence. The Festival of 1906—the first in three years—will eclipse in every way all its predecessors. On the night of the opening, August 28, a war of balloons will afford an aerial spectacle of a magnitude never before attempted. Twenty thousand 14-foot paper balloons will be sent up all over Cincinnati and given signals and while dynamite bombs buried high are exploding, sending their thunderous roar for miles about the entire sky will be covered with the flaming voyagers of the air. Balloon will collide with balloon and the sight will be one of unique novelty.

The Fall Festival is to last four weeks and has been well defined as the Fair in Tabloid Form. The Washington Park shows are grouped around the fountain and will be in the order of the famous "Pike" at St. Louis and include "The Hippodrome," patterned after New York's big amusement palace; the Temple of Art, Halls of Tours, House of Nonense and Palace of Aladdin. The Buckwood Inn is a place of refreshment and vaudeville combined. Paris has her Chateau de Monte, and the Fall Festival House of Death is a miniature of one of the most famous cafes in the world. The service will be on coffee, and under the glass at the head of each black casket will blink the red eyes of a grinning skull. The chairs will be made of whitened bones.

These shows are merely incidental to great industrial features and a Government Exhibit worth talking about. At Music Hall, "The Blue Moon," staged by the Shuberters through the courtesy of the Heuck Opera House Company of Cincinnati, lessees of the Lyric Theater, will give its first American presentation. This is the musical spectacle that enthused London for over a year. It cost $75,000 to place "The Blue Moon" in American atmosphere. James T. Powers is the leading comedian of the star cast and 250 people take part.

"Fighting the Flames" the show which has made such tremendous hits at Luna Park, Coney Island, and at the White City, in Chicago—will open on the 28th of August at the new building, the scene of "Marco Polo" success. Claude Hagen, who originated the spectacle of fire fighting in the case of the Cincinnati construction.

The Fall Festival is Cincinnati's greatest amusement and interest offering to the country, and preparations are now under way to entertain hundreds of thousands of visitors from August 28 to September 22. Special round-trip rates to Cincinnati have been made by all the railroads—in official ruling that stamps the importance of the Fall Festival as a National event.

CAVE SPRING STOCK FARM

WILL BE SOLD AT

PUBLIC SALE

Wednesday, Aug. 22, '06

This beautiful farm (for over thirty years the home of the late Luther A. Davis) is recognized as one of Jessamine county's most fertile and best improved farms. It contains 372 acres located in a most excellent neighborhood, nine miles from Lexington on the Harrodsburg pike, five miles from Nicholasville, one mile from Neatton and one mile from Keene. It is substantially and attractively improved. The residence is brick with ten rooms, is provided with numerous out-buildings—all in excellent condition. Also two good tenant houses and two large tobacco barns, a large stock barn and several smaller stables. It is unusually well watered by three never failing springs, two large ponds and two cisterns. It is properly subdivided by good fences and is in every respect a most desirable home and farm. It is well supplied with fruit, having about three acres in orchards.

The crops now growing upon it are approximately 95 acres of bluegrass, 95 acres of young clover, 25 acres of clover meadow, 16 acres of timothy meadow, 20 acres of corn and 9 acres of tobacco. Immediate possession of farm and crops will be given. It will be offered both as a whole and in two tracts of 187 and 85 acres, respectively.

This farm must be seen to have its many attractions appreciated. Those interested in the purchase of such a farm are asked to look this one over. By writing me when to expect them they will have a carriage to meet them at Neatton, on the L. & A. railroad.

Will also Sell all the Stock, Farming Implements, Etc.

Sale will begin at TEN O'CLOCK.

A $5,000 Pipe.
That the pipe trade will be magnificently represented at the Tobacco Trades Exposition is emphasized by the entrance of the old established pipe firm of Wm.
Demuth & Co., importers and manufacturers of New York. This firm has contracted for large space immediately facing the main entrance of Madison Square Garden, and their exhibit will be one of the great features of the show.
The famous $5,000 meerschaum pipe owned by this firm, and which was awarded a gold medal at the Chicago World's Fair, will occupy a prominent position in the exhibit. The carving upon this pipe represents the landing of Christopher Columbus on American shores. There are forty different figures in the group, each perfect in the minutest details, and comprising weeks of work of the patient carver.
Another remarkable pipe will be one carved from the largest solid piece of amber ever mined, represented the head of a Texas steer.
This pipe is valued at $3,000.
There will also be a very distinguished family of meerschaum pipes, the head carved to represent every President of the United States from Washington to Roosevelt. Each of these pipes will be displayed upon an individual plush stand and the person who pauses
at this show case will be greeted by this assemblage of residents
as he enters the great building.

OLD AXIOM GIVEN A PUNCTURE.
Large Employer of Labor Says He Wants No Whistling Workmen.
"Tis sad to puncture an old axiom," said the employer of a large number of men, "but my experience with other men enables me to let a little of the air of fallacy out of the old saw which grinds out a platitude that the 'whistling workman' is the best, or that the 'singing cook'
makes the best sauce."

"From early childhood we are taught to place the workman who whistles and sings at the bench or over his work as the ideal of his kind. In theory perhaps this idea holds good, but from an experience of 20 years in the handling of men I will pass the whistling fellow by for the one who does not whistle or sing while at work. And I have found this true in clerical pursuits as well as those involving manual labor."

"When a man is not working whistling or singing produces a certain amount of mental relaxation; it denotes a certain vacancy of mind. It is impossible for a man to whistle or sing if the mental faculties are at all absorbed in work. It requires mental concentration of more or less effort to turn out good work or to produce satisfactory results in any calling.
"Whistling interferes with this concentration, though the concentration may, by reason of a perfect knowledge of the work being turned out, have become mechanical on the part of the workman. The singing or the humming of a tune produces still greater mental vacancy. It is in these moments that workmen make mistakes, often costly ones to themselves or to their employers."

HERMIT CLAIMS FORTUNE.
Henry Raciliff, who has been leading the life of a hermit in a little hut at North Muskegon for a number of years, has gone to his old home in New York state to claim a fortune, said to amount to $30,000, which was left him by his brother.
At one time Raciliff was a prosperous merchant in his native
state, but during a poker game
one night, shortly before the civil war, he was accused of cheating
after he had raked in a large stake at cards. During the altercation which followed it was said that he drew a revolver and shot
his opponent dead in self-defense.
A wealthy broker refused Raciliff financial assistance at the time of the trial, and when he was finally acquitted he was pensiless and broken down in health.
He stole away from the scene of his alleged wrongdoing, and after wandering about the country finally settled down at North Muskegon,
where he has lived in his little hut
for many years.

ONE ON JOHN BULL.
"Why is it said that the sun
never sets on the British empire?"
"Because it is so large, I suppose."
"Not at all; because the good Lord was afraid to trust it in the dark."
NO TIME TO BE LOST.
"Why don't you propose if you love her?"
"She hasn't known me long enough."
"Great Scott, man, propose at once then. Don't take any chances!"
RELIEVED.
"In time," said the doctor,
"this trouble may affect your mind."
"Oh," she replied, with a sigh of relief, "I was afraid you might say it would ruin my complexion."

OBEYED INSTRUCTIONS.

"No," answered Wedderly,
"she's still against me every time
there is a family argument on tap."

REPARATION.
BY NELLIE CRAVEY GILLMORE.
(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)
Rogers stood in the door of his mountain hut, watching the day
take its last spasmodic breaths.
For the first time in many days
the air was clear of snow, but the dull, congested cloud hanging low overhead, seemed only gorging itself for a fresh outburst. In the distance, shadowy chains of mountains thrust their craggy summits into a misty black expanse, and nowhere was there sign or sound
to mitigate the stillness.
As Rogers stood waited, the last thrust of daylight wavered dimly
across the barren and spun itself
out in the swiftly encroaching darkness. At the signal, he turned abruptly back into the room and made the door secure behind him. He struck a light and stood surveying the small, boxlike
apartment with weary, unrecognized eyes. Instead of making him forget, the five years' exile—each day and hour a link forged into a chain of deliberate destiny—
seemed but to bind him more keenly, more irrevocably, to the Past.
As he bitterly reviewed the crushing sorrow of that Other Life, with all its ensuing emphasis and hurt, a variety of emotions were depicted upon his thin, expressive face. But they passed as quickly as they came, and Rogers
lifted his head with a startled, alert movement as a vague, but unmistakable sound struck on his trained ear; a muffled cry of distress. In a moment it repeated itself, sharp and human and despairing. He jumped to his feet, hurried to the door and flung it wide open.

There was a gust of biting air and a blinding whiff of sleet in his eyes, like the sting from thousands of tiny lashes. But he jerked in his breast by a tremendous effort, and with swift footsteps, made his way across the snow-carpeted barren to where a huddled object showed sharply
against the ghostlike whiteness.
He stooped and touched the prostrate figure with gentle hands, but there was no response,
and gathering the unconscious
man in his arms, he staggered back into the cabin. As carefully as a woman might have done, he placed him on his own rude pal-let, and piled the fire high with fresh fuel, the coals breaking instantly into a hissing blaze. Then he procured a flask of brandy and forced a few drops of it between the sick man's teeth. He swallowed it spasmodically, and in a little while there were signs of life.
Rogers sat down in front of the fire, keeping his eyes on the other's face, who seemed now to be sleeping naturally. Once, he bent to replenish the fire, and when he looked up again the man's wide-open gaze was full upon him in a strange, startled scrutiny.
Rogers left his chair and came up to him with a reassuring smile.
"Feel any better now?" he asked.
The other nodded and tried to raise himself on one elbow, but Rogers put him back gently. "Not yet awhile," he cautioned.
The stranger closed his eyes wearily and again seemed to sleep. His breathing was good, and there was a clear color in his cheeks. But presently he looked up again and spoke:
"Rogers," he said, abruptly,
"I've been looking all over creation for you and I've found you at last!"
"Looking for me?"
"For you, yes. I am a dying man. Look at me and you can see that."
"Consumption," he went on,
tapping his chest with one weak hand; "the doctors told me I couldn't last a month." He was growing a little excited, but calmed himself suddenly and went on more quietly:

"As I was saying, I've been searching the wide world for you.
There's something I want to tell you—something I've got to tell you."

Rogers looked at him a little ap-prehensively and shook his head.
"My dear fellow," he protested,
"I'm afraid—"

"No, no, no, I'm not. I know what you'd say. I am in full possession of all my senses. Would to God I was not!" he put in fervently.
"Years ago," he pursued, after a brief pause, "I found out that she —my wife—loved you. She never cared for me, and she's yours by all the laws of Heaven. Before we were married I knew that she —wasn't— that she didn't love me as the woman who was to be my wife should, but I was determined to have her by fair means or foul.
And I did, by foul. I intercepted your letters, your letters and hers,
when I was postmaster at H—H—. Afterwards I waited, waited till, sore and cut to the heart by your seeming neglect and desertion, she was ready to turn to me."

He paused a moment out of sheer weakness, and wiped the dew drops from his mouth and forehead. When he had controlled himself sufficiently, he went on:

"I loved her—God, I worshiped her, but I knew it was you she cared for, and not me. It did not take me a week to realize my mistake. And Rogers"—his voice dropped quiveringly—"when the boy came, he was your breathing image. I saw it at once, from an old photograph I had discovered
among my wife's trinkets—a photograph of you. If it will afford you any satisfaction, man, my life was hell. She was always good, always kind, always true, but I knew. And when I could bear it no longer, I left. I had been told that I should live only a limited time, and my conscience
was helping along the work.
There was only one thing I could do, and I've done it. When I'm gone—go back to her—and that she might think a little more kindly of me at the last, tell her how I've repented—and confessed everything. Marry her and take care of the little one—I—" His voice broke and trailed off to a whisper. There was a long, shuddering sigh, and the dying man's lids quivered suddenly over unconscious eyes.

Rogers sat for a moment as though turned to stone; his face was as white as the snow that bissed against the windows; his eyes bright and startled. But suddenly his features changed,
lightened and fleeting fingers touched them with a ripple of silent joy.

A moment, and the dying man opened his eyes again—they were quite rational now. He looked up appealingly into Rogers' face and groped outside the cover with cold,
trembling hands.
Rogers caught them suddenly in his warm, strong grasp, and his head dropped forward on his breast.

A minute passed, two, three.
An hour went by; then another,
and neither stirred. At midnight
the distant sound of a bell startled Rogers from his reverie. He looked up swiftly, and bent to catch the sound of the other's heart-beats.

But the Last Great Enemy had come.

Greatest Lumber Port.
Portland, Ore., according to the Oregonian of that city, is the greatest lumber port of the world.
Recently there were loading at one time, or under charter to load,
for China, Japan, Australia,
South America and Europe, steam and sail vessels with a capacity of more than 20,000,000 feet, and for coast ports there was loading a fleet with a capacity of 5,000,000 feet. Following these vessels, under charter to arrive from foreign ports was a fleet with a capacity of 19,000,000 feet and a coasting fleet of 6,000,000 feet capacity.

His Solitude.
Mrs. Jubb—Wake up, John;
I'm sure a burglar is down in the pantry, and he's eating all my pies.

DEATHS.

YOUNG.—Amelia Young, aged 17 months, daughter of Judge Allie W. Young and wife, of Morehead, died on Tuesday night, Aug. 7, 1906, after being sick for a month. After a decided improvement on Tuesday the relapse came suddenly. Their friends will sympathize with them in their sorrow. Mrs. Amelia Young, of our city, has been there most of the time during the sickness.

JONES.—Eugene Jones died July 7, 1906 at Belize, British Honduras, after a sickness of ten days. He was with R. D. Ratliff at Ganado, Texas, for two years. He was born in Bath county and was the son of Thos. J. and Bettie Hathaway Jones.

We desire to thank the friends who were so thoughtful and sympathetic during the sickness of our sister, Miss Polly Howard.

P. A. Howard and Sisters.

KERR.—Smith P. Kerr died at his home in Winchester on Monday morning, August 13, 1906, aged 66 years. He was a native of Bullitt county, near Louisville. He moved to Winchester in 1878 and engaged in the milling business. He leaves a wife and one daughter, Mrs. David Matlack. He has been one of the town's most influential and prosperous business men, and is wealthy.

For about twenty years M. T. McEldoway has been associated in the business with him. The burial will be at Winchester this afternoon, after the funeral service at Presbyterian Church.

SOCIAL EVENTS.

The Courier-Journal Belles attract attention wherever they go.

On Friday afternoon, August 10, Miss Mayme Greene entertained from 4 to 6 in honor of Mrs. Samuel W. Greene, of Louisville. The color scheme of Miss Greene's elegant reception was yellow and white, being carried out beautifully in decorations, ices, cakes, punch, and also in the costumes of the charming young ladies who assisted in serving. The punch table was presided over by grace and beauty in the persons of Misses Arabella Bogie, Fan McLaughlin and Emily Nesbitt, while in the dining room Mrs. Collier, Misses Charlotte Rogers, Paulina Judy and Garnette Robinson presided with exquisite taste. The entire lower floor of Miss Greene's beautiful home was thrown open to her guests, who had only to gaze that they might behold a bower of beauty, not the least attractive feature being the receiving line composed of Miss Greene, Mrs. Samuel W. Greene, Mrs. Percy Bryan and Miss Berry. The elite of Mt. Sterling were present and as usual were charmed by the delightful expression of Miss Greene's hospitality.

Reunion of the James Prewitt Family.

PERRY-PIERATT.

On Saturday evening at 7 o'clock, August 11, 1906, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Pieratt on Spencer, near this city, Mr. W. T. Perry and Mrs. Lulu Mae Pieratt, both of Morgan county, Ky., were united in marriage by B. W. Trimble, in the presence of a few relatives and friends. For six years the groom has been a traveling salesman for the Vanderen Hardware Co., of Lexington, and has a large circle of acquaintances and customers in Eastern Kentucky. The bride was the widow of Valentine Pieratt. She is the daughter of Hon. Wick Kendall, deceased, and a sister of Mrs. Steve Pieratt. The bride is a handsome and attractive woman, and with the groom who has a fine physique and agreeable manner will favorably impress those who see them. They left on a special excursion train at 8:40 for Newport News. For about two weeks they will visit Norfolk, Washington and other cities. On their return they will make their home for the present with Mrs. Pieratt.

Simple Way to Cure Catarrh by Hymel Without Stomach Dosing.

It is the height of folly to dose the stomach with internal medicines to cure nasal catarrh. It cannot be cured except the catarrhal germs that are present in the nose, throat and lungs have first been killed.

The soothing air of Hymel heals the smarting and raw membrane of the air passage in the nose, throat and lungs, kills off the catarrhal germs and rids the system of the last traces of catarrh.

The complete Hymel outfit consists of a hard rubber inhaler which can be carried in the purse or vest pocket, a medicine dropper, and a bottle of Hymel, and costs only one dollar, while extra bottles can be obtained for 50 cents.

W. S. Lloyd positively guarantees a cure when Hymel is used in accordance with the simple directions on the package, or he will refund the money. This certainly shows his faith and belief in the virtues of Hymel.

The encouragement of drunkenness for the sake of the profits on the sale of drink is certainly one of the most criminal methods of assassination for money hitherto adopted by the braves of any age or country.—Ruskin.

Mayor Interviewed.

In a recent interview with Mayor O'Brien, of Paris, we learned something of his convictions as to the obligations of a public official. "How is it," we asked, "that you who was once a saloonist believe in such strict enforcement of the law?"

"I got into the business by accident more than by choice, but while in it, I believe in honoring the Sunday law."

"But that is different from what most saloon men think these days, we replied.

"Yes," he said, "but when a man becomes a public official it doesn't matter what his personal convictions on a subject may be. He wants to enforce the law, and it is not a matter of personal privilege but public duty."—Kentucky Issue.

At Beattyville, Ky., James Bush, charged with the murder of Henry Ward last May, was released on $5,000 on Aug. 3.

The saloon or the nation's rest day which?

Something in San Francisco.

The first Monday morning after the reopening of the saloon in San Francisco (July 9, 1906), there were 74 victims before the Police Court, as against 5 the previous Monday; 73 on Friday, as against 3 on the previous Friday, and the second Monday 113, as against 4 on the second Monday before reopening. Earthquake April 18. Never again can a man with ordinary intelligence argue that high license reduces the evils of the drink curse or that prohibition properly enforced does not prohibit.

Total abstinence is the leading requisition for employment in what is believed to be the first municipality owned and built street railroad in the United States now under construction at Monroe, La. More Important Than a Public Official Shall Be Honest and Capable.

An ideal condition of politics in this country will be reached when neither party can nominate a corrupt or incompetent man for its officer without the certainty of his defeat. This condition of affairs can be secured only when the Christian people, regardless of party affiliation, will not vote for a "yellow dog" whether he be branded Republican or Democrat. It is very much more important to the country that a public official shall be honest and capable than that he shall belong to any party. A dishonest man has no politics except his own interest and he has no claims on honest people, no matter who nominates him.—Elizabethtown News.

Exports and Imports of Tobacco for Month of June.

The fiscal year 1905-'06 closed with a fair month's business done in June. The exports were not as heavy as in June, 1905, but the loss was overcome by the gain in imports over June, 1905. In Leaf Tobacco the total exports amounted to 16,671,278 pounds, a loss of 6,947,415 pounds, or 31 per cent.

The exports of Cigars also show a loss. Cigarettes gained $3,340,000, or 18 per cent, and Plug Tobacco 127,421 pounds, or 21 per cent, over June, 1905. The total value of all Domestic exports for the month was $2,149,081, a loss of $408,757, or 15 per cent, as compared with June, 1905.

The imports of Wrapper Leaf, though of a fair volume, are smaller than the receipts for the past two years. As compared with June, 1905, there is shown to be a falling off of 210,728 pounds, or 18 per cent. The filler imports for June, 1906, are larger than the average month's business, and show a gain over the same month of last year of 747,576 pounds, or 21 per cent.
